Jennifer Stone (pronouns: she & they) is a facilitator, educator, and spiritual activist committed to collective belonging and right relationship. With a professional background as a middle & high school teacher, restorative justice trainer for K-12 educators and administrators, program director in a progressive religious community, and nature-based rites of passage facilitator, Jennifer is currently dedicating most of her energy into organizing fellow white people to uproot and transform white supremacy in our bodies, communities, lineages, and systems at large, including through collaborative partnerships within Showing Up for Racial Justice \(SURJ\) Marin. Jennifer also holds a Master of Arts in Social Change through the Graduate Theological Union/Starr King School for the Ministry, and is a lifelong student and practitioner of multi-religious animist, magical, and mystical traditions, especially informed by Celtic ancestral practices. Having previously lived around the Bay Area, in Oregon, New York City, the island of Eleuthera in The Bahamas, and in a Quaker intentional community in the Sierra Nevada foothills, Jennifer is now sheltering in place with her partner, his 12-year-old daughter, and their many animal housemates in Fairfax (Coast Miwok land).
